The Massachusetts Cultural Council is an independent agency of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts that grants public money to support the not-for-profit arts, humanities and interpretive sciences in the state.

Our mission is to promote excellence, access, education and diversity in the arts, humanities and interpretive sciences in order to improve the quality of life for all Massachusetts residents and contribute to the economic vitality of our communities.

The Massachusetts Cultural Council believes that the arts, sciences and humanities have the power to build healthier, more livable, more vital communities. We believe they enrich, exalt and provoke; they are an essential part of a strong educational system and they contribute enormously to our economy. The arts, sciences and humanities build bridges between cultures; they can address—or better yet, prevent—some of our most stubborn social problems. They help us interpret our past and shape our future. And they help us understand what it means to be human.

The Massachusetts Cultural Council (MCC) is committed to building a central place for the arts, sciences and humanities in the everyday lives of community members throughout the Commonwealth. The MCC pursues its mission through a combination of grant programs, partnerships and services for not-for-profit cultural organizations, schools, communities and individual artists.

Restaurant Summer*

Dear Friends,

Over time, Massachusetts has flourished from its spirit of invention and imagination. From Emily Dickinson and Winslow Homer to Alexander Graham Bell and Dr. Seuss, some of the world's best-known artists and academics, poets and musicians, creators and captains of industry have proudly called the Bay State home. Today Massachusetts is teeming with the kind of creativity that makes communities, and the people in them, stronger and healthier every day.

The Massachusetts Cultural Council provides support for thousands of artists and organizations through grants, programs and services intended to create more opportunities in and access to culture for more people. It is our honor to introduce the 2000 Annual Report of this extraordinary agency committed to advancing the role of the arts, sciences and humanities in building a better Commonwealth.

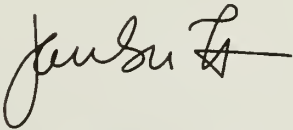

For more than 30 years, Massachusetts has made a valuable investment in artists, communities, schools and cultural organizations, which has greatly paid off in a more vibrant economy, increased cultural assets, more motivated students and a higher quality of life.

We applaud the work of the Massachusetts Cultural Council, whose grants and services inspire additional investments by the public, private and philanthropic sectors. And we thank all of the talented individuals and organizations whose dedication and vision ensures a better, brighter future for us all.

Sincerely,

Governor Paul Cellucci

Lieutenant Governor Jane Swift

Message from Leadership

Greetings!

The arts and humanities make the ordinary extraordinary—a view of the ocean captured on canvas, a family tradition that inspires a hymn. Scientific concepts that become even more spectacular when experienced hands-on.

Massachusetts has encouraged the extraordinary by investing in creative people and programs for more than 30 years. With a growing annual appropriation from the Legislature, the Massachusetts Cultural Council is helping to create a central place for the arts, sciences and humanities in the everyday lives of community members across the Commonwealth.

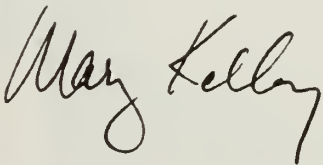

From the Berkshires to Boston, there are more than 3,000 cultural organizations and thousands of individual artists, some established, others just emerging. At the Massachusetts Cultural Council, we take great pride in the fact that our grants and services have become a catalyst for additional support for the arts and culture, stimulating public programs and leveraging private dollars. And the Commonwealth has received a tremendous return on its investment through better educational opportunities, improved livability and economic vitality in the state. The pages that follow illustrate the importance of this initial investment and outline the ways in which working artists and community organizations are maximizing it.

This year, the MCC adopted a five-year strategic plan. It is the result of many months of hard work and the valuable contributions of individuals and organizations across the Commonwealth, and we are deeply indebted to those who helped us shape our strategy. Our goals for the future are ambitious, and we will work assertively to achieve them:

- Expand the pool of human and financial resources available for the arts, sciences and humanities;
- Increase public awareness of the essential role artists and cultural organizations play in enhancing the quality of life;
- Support and encourage the development of individual artists, who are at the core of our cultural community;
- Support efforts by communities to make the arts, sciences and humanities part of daily life in every Massachusetts city and town;
- Support cultural policies and programs that promote the education and development of young people;
- Promote the health and long-term stability of cultural organizations that have track records of excellence and community service; and
- Inspire and engage the broadest possible support from the public, private and philanthropic sectors, and create a coalition of investors and advocates for the arts, sciences and humanities in our communities.

The Massachusetts Cultural Council's appropriation grew to $18.3 million in FY2000, but this cannot be taken for granted. Our future plans are driven by our determination to advance a greater awareness of the role culture plays in building communities and improving our quality of life and to inspire involvement from many different sectors throughout the region.

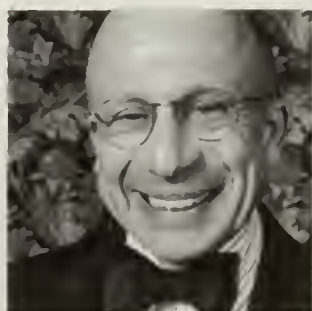

Together, we can build stronger, more creative communities across the Commonwealth.

new beginnings

It's a new millennium, which gives us an opportunity to reflect on our past and reinvest in our future.

Massachusetts has a history of more than 30 years of public support for the arts, sciences and humanities, and in that time there's been tremendous growth in the number of cultural organizations and programs that build our communities and nurture our souls.

The benefits of the state's investment in the arts, sciences and humanities are visible across the board: in our schools, arts education improves learning and self-esteem; in our economy, the creative industry in New England accounts for billions of dollars in revenue and 4 percent of the entire workforce (more than the region's software or medical technology industries); in our cities and towns, which are being revitalized as more municipalities integrate culture with their planning efforts; and in our overall quality of life. Massachusetts is among the most desirable places to live, work and raise a family.

In order to keep Massachusetts competitive in the twenty-first century, cultural programs are essential. An exciting initiative led by New England's business community is shedding new light on the arts and culture as an industry cluster, allowing us to look at it in much the same way we view the financial services and technology sectors. The New England Council, in partnership with a consortium of regional arts agencies that includes the Massachusetts Cultural Council, released a report that, for the first time, looks at the industry in its entirety—not-for-profit and commercial sectors alike—and provides revealing insights into avenues of potential growth.

With this new information, we will be able to create and leverage extraordinary opportunities for collaborations that extend well beyond what is traditionally perceived as the "cultural community" to include business and government. The results will benefit every economic sector throughout New England.

THE CREATIVE ECONOMY

A New England Council report released in 2000 provides a new and exciting definition for the arts and culture industry: the Creative Cluster, comprising not-for-profit and commercial organizations, supporting jobs for 245,000 New Englanders—including over 116,000 in Massachusetts. In addition, the cluster generates more than $4.4 billion in payroll, more than other industry sectors such as health, technology and computer software. The Creative Cluster is projected to grow 18 percent during the decade ending in 2006—almost twice as fast as the region's overall workforce.

Another key factor in the competitiveness of the region is the workforce. The way we do business has changed dramatically, and when we look ahead, we see success defined by qualities such as flexibility, team spirit and creative thinking. Several studies show that an arts education helps develop the very capabilities required by the workplace today: critical thinking, creative problem solving and cooperative decision making.

new beginnings

As required under the Education Reform Act of 1993, the Board of Education in 1999 adopted the Massachusetts Arts Curriculum Framework, which outlines the skills and knowledge that all the Commonwealth's students should have. Schools and districts are developing and implementing comprehensive arts curricula, with artists and cultural organizations as key partners in the effort. Many of the arts, humanities and science education projects supported by the MCC have inspired increased school and community commitments to cultural programming. Developing more such initiatives is a priority.

CHAMPIONS OF CHANGE

The Impact of the Arts on Learning cites UCLA researcher James Catterall's study of the school records of 25,000 students, which found that those with high levels of arts participation had higher grades and scored better on standardized tests than other students. The difference was most significant for students from low-income backgrounds who had high arts involvement.

In addition to the benefits of arts education that are related to aptitude, attitude and workplace readiness, those who get involved in the arts at an early age are more likely to participate and attend cultural events. According to a new study released by the National Endowment for the Arts, Massachusetts is already among the nation's leaders when it comes to public participation in the arts. Combined audience attendance exceeds 45 million—about eight times the state's total population. And the appeal of the Commonwealth's cultural resources reaches beyond state borders—tourism is one of Massachusetts' largest industries, drawing nearly 29 million visitors annually.

As the economic environment changes, so too must our understanding of the role of the arts and culture in supporting it. As a leader in the effort to adapt, the Massachusetts Cultural Council developed a strategic plan outlining the challenges and opportunities for the future and detailing a course of action. Understanding that collaboration is the key to success, the Council engaged people from communities statewide through public forums, surveys, program evaluations and focus groups—in all, more than 2,000 constituents helped shape our strategy.

RICH IN CULTURAL RESOURCES

Bay Staters are among the nation's most avid readers and more than 60 percent participate in the visual or performing arts, according to a recent study by the National Endowment for the Arts. Of the 15 most populous U.S. states, Massachusetts is among the leaders in the number of people engaging in the performance or creation of art. In addition, the survey cites a number of key advantages enjoyed by Massachusetts residents, including a broad array of high-quality performances, museums and galleries in many convenient locations.

Over the next five years, the MCC will focus on the development of new and nontraditional funding partnerships and will maximize the impact of MCC grants through an aggressive program of direct services for artists, cultural organizations, local cultural councils and schools.

We will continue to be proactive when it comes to new technologies, which we expect will improve efficiency, expand our reach and raise our visibility. The Council's web site, www.massculturalcouncil.org, was launched in January 1999 and has been enthusiastically received for its news, grant guidelines and up-to-date information. Our plans include developing bulletin boards to serve our diverse constituencies better and creating an electronic grant system to streamline the process for applicants.

THE POWER OF CULTURE TO BOOST THE ECONOMY

Culture plays an increasing role as communities across the Commonwealth work to revitalize themselves and build a better quality of life. The Massachusetts Cultural Council is serving as a catalyst for that development. With funding through the MCC's Cultural Economic Development Program, local leaders from various sectors are developing partnerships to improve downtown areas and take full advantage of cultural resources to stimulate local income and create jobs.

The Council is pleased to be taking a leadership role in helping communities address long-range development issues, such as cultural facilities and funding stabilization. Through challenge grants and technical assistance, the Council's Endowment Grant Program has promoted good planning, while also helping organizations think strategically about their futures.

High LIGHTS

THE POWER OF CULTURE TO MAKE CONNECTIONS

A collaborative project involving elders and teens is challenging the assumption that people no longer share the knowledge and experience once routinely passed from one generation to the next. With a grant made possible through major funding from the National Endowment for the Arts, Mid-Atlantic Arts Foundation and the Charles E. Culpepper Foundation, the Massachusetts Cultural Council created a forum for different generations to begin learning about each other and to discover and develop bonds through art. The project is part of the MCC's Elder Arts Initiative, which aims to foster connections for making the arts a part of life for seniors, increasing both physical and mental well-being.

In another important step to preserve heritages for future generations, the Massachusetts Cultural Council launched an effort to survey and document the state's folk and traditional arts resources. With a wealth of crafts and trades, Massachusetts will be able to learn more these folk traditions and leverage them with educational programs, apprenticeships and valuable documentation to ensure their value for years to come.

THE POWER OF CULTURE TO CHANGE LIVES

The arts have a way of transforming the human experience, but until now we've known very little about exactly how and why. Researchers in the field, including James S. Catterall from the University of California at Los Angeles and Shirley Brice Heath of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, have been able to identify and illustrate the impact of the arts on student achievement, in and out of school. Despite diverse methodologies, the findings are the same: the arts boost student attendance, test scores and self-esteem and have a particularly profound effect on at-risk youth.

The Massachusetts Cultural Council received national recognition for its work with at-risk youth with its second consecutive Coming Up Taller Award from the President's Committee on the Arts and the Humanities. Both honorees, PAH! Deaf Youth Theatre and Angkor Dance Troupe, are funded by the Council's YouthReach Initiative, which supports partnerships that administer substantive arts programs for young people at times they're most in need of constructive activities—after school, on weekends and during the summer.

Modeled after YouthReach, the MCC's Science in the Community Program focuses on opportunities to engage young people in science-related activities outside the classroom; this year, the Council was able to fund two additional programs with multiyear grants, bringing the total number of active projects to 12.

Exciting things are happening inside the classroom, as well. The new Arts Curriculum Framework approved by the Board of Education ensures that every Massachusetts public school student will receive instruction in dance, music, theater and visual arts beginning as early as preschool. The Council remains committed to education reform on the state and local levels and expanded the reach and impact of the Education Partnership Initiative in 2000 to support alliances between school districts and cultural organizations. To date, schools in more than 30 communities have benefited from these partnerships.

p r o g r a m

Over the past few years, the Massachusetts Cultural Council has launched or expanded efforts to promote the role that arts, sciences and humanities can play in building stronger, healthier communities. The Council is pleased to support a range of initiatives that use the arts, sciences and humanities to promote specific goals including economic development, education reform, and prevention activities for young people. In 2000, we supported several of these specialized initiatives, which are highlighted on the pages that follow.

For more than 30 years, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts has made a valuable investment in the arts, sciences and humanities. The Massachusetts Cultural Council's funds are appropriated annually by the Governor and the state legislature—$18.3 million in fiscal year 2000. In addition, the agency receives support from the National Endowment for the Arts—$545,000 for use in the state agency's core grant programs, arts education activities and community development.

Grants and services are available to not-for-profit organizations, schools, artists and communities for cultural activities that enrich the lives of people across the Commonwealth. Grant recipients are expected to demonstrate both excellence and public benefit in their programs. Outreach to the community and to underserved groups—such as low-income families, people with disabilities, rural, bilingual and minority populations—are also important criteria for funding.

Programs are administered through four departments: Communities, Organizations, Education and Artists. A complete list of grants made in fiscal year 2000 is included in the accompanying booklet as part of this report.

Communities

The Massachusetts Cultural Council distributes funds to every city and town in the Commonwealth through 335 local cultural councils (LCCs), the largest grassroots program of its kind in the nation. In 2000, $3.9 million was allocated using a formula based on population and property values that gave priority to less-wealthy communities. This was supplemented by $204,442 for the Matching Incentive Program, which provides additional dollars to communities that succeed in raising funds in addition to their state allocation. This year, LCCs made more than 7,100 grant awards in support of community-based cultural activities.

More than half the money distributed to LCCs, over $2 million, was used to support educational activities for children in the arts, humanities and sciences.

Over $630,000 was distributed through the PASS Program, which assists schools with the cost of cultural field trips for students from prekindergarten through 12th grade.

A growing number of local cultural councils are raising funds from their municipalities, local businesses or individuals to match the funds they receive from the Council—this year, LCCs raised close to $1.5 million through these sources. Five of the LCCs are highlighted on the next page.

Warren Cultural Council Potter Rick Hamelin wanted to work with high school students to create historically correct, hip roll terra cotta tiles for use on the gabled tower of the Warren Public Library. Joining forces with the library and Quaboag Regional High School, Hamelin taught students proper restoration techniques and tile construction while also repairing a town building.

Chatham Cultural Council The fate of five historic paintings created by significant nineteenth and twentieth century Cape Cod artists was sealed through a grant awarded by the Chatham Cultural Council. Owned by the local historical society, the restored paintings will be enjoyed for years to come by both residents and visitors to the Cape Cod town.

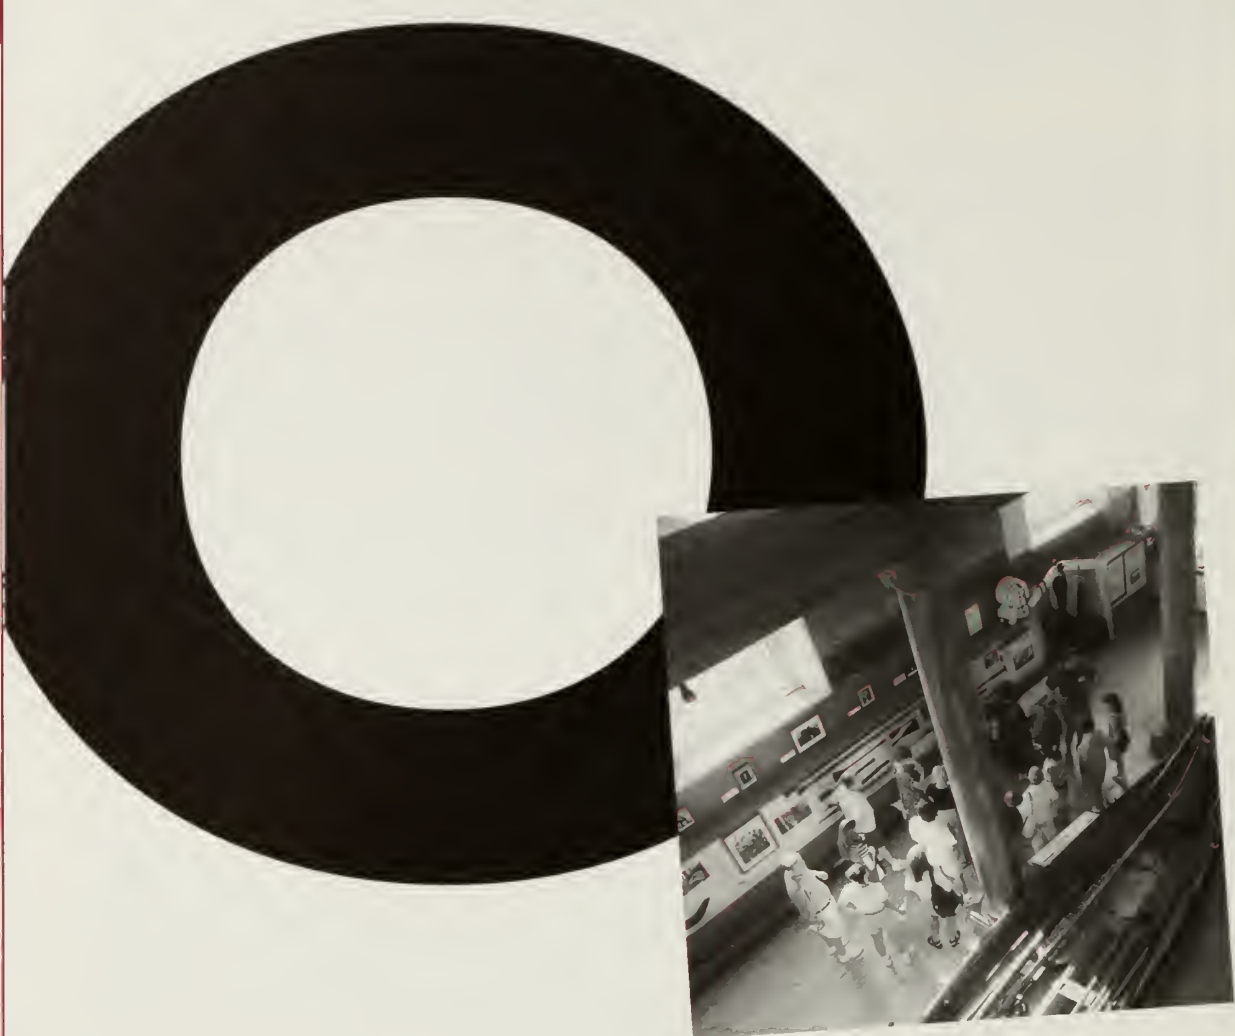

Rowley Cultural Council A marsh extending from West Gloucester to Salisbury is the focus of a video documentary entitled "Voices from the Great Marsh." Through a combination of oral history interviews, present-day and archival footage of the region and ecological commentary, the film financed by the Rowley Cultural Council will serve to heighten appreciation of the natural and cultural heritage of the area.

Springfield Cultural Council Activities supported by the Springfield Cultural Council now receive higher visibility as a result of a clever marketing tool. Words and images that publicize the arts in Springfield are wrapped around a truck body using MegaShell, a vinyl wrap currently used on city buses for advertising. The mobile billboard appears in parades and at city-sponsored events throughout the year.

Cultural Council of Northern Berkshire One hundred three children from three Berkshire area schools—Pine Cobble School, St. Stanislaus Kosta School and Abbott Memorial School—enjoyed programs at the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield through PASS grants from the Cultural Council of Northern Berkshire. Subjects covered included: "Scorpions, Spiders & Ticks" "Lifestyles of the Cold & Scaly" and "Leapin' Lizards."

CULTURAL ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT The Cultural Economic Development (CED) Program seeks to strengthen the economic impact of culture by making a direct connection between culture and the economy. CED projects are distinguished by the use of culture to stimulate income and employment opportunities, enterprises and other income-generating activity. The MCC encourages this work through grants, partnerships and dialogue. Since its inception in 1997, the program has distributed $586,233 to 11 pilot projects throughout the state for new and innovative efforts to foster and promote the use of culture as a tool for economic development. In 2000, CED provided $259,450 to fund new projects in Provincetown and New Bedford, and existing projects in Boston, Holyoke and Great Barrington. To be eligible for funding, projects must be collaborative and cross-disciplinary. A coming together of perspectives, skills and resources is an effective way to increase cultural awareness and support from economic agencies, as well as heighten the cultural community's understanding of economic development.

Organizations

Massachusetts is home to an extraordinary collection of more than 3,000 not-for-profit cultural organizations. In 2000, the Massachusetts Cultural Council distributed over $10 million across a range of grant programs to more than 500 not-for-profit cultural organizations; all of our direct grants to organizations require a match of at least dollar-for-dollar. And although these groups are of varying sizes and disciplines, they share a commitment to excellence and to the people they serve.

The MCC's Organizational Support Program, providing multiyear matching grants, is money well spent: the not-for-profit cultural industry in Massachusetts has an annual economic impact of more than $2.5 billion.

The Endowment Grant Program for Cultural Organizations combines grants and technical assistance to help organizations considering the creation or expansion of endowments. This program promotes planning and stability, while helping organizations think strategically about their future needs. In 2000, the MCC awarded $939,000 to 14 cultural organizations that demonstrated readiness to start or augment endowment programs.

The MCC provides operational support for many small organizations, artist-run groups and human service providers—61 percent of grant recipients have budgets under $250,000.

A state grant often represents a "seal of approval" that can be essential in raising funds from other donors—this year, Organizational Support grants were matched with private contributions of more than $20 million. Four of the organizational support grants are listed on the next page.

EcoTarium, Worcester Science in the Community Working in collaboration with Girls Inc. of Worcester and the University of Massachusetts Medical School, middle school girls are given the opportunity to make the connection between science and everyday life. The project provides leadership opportunities, career planning and evaluation for its participants.

The New Bedford Whaling Museum, New Bedford Organizational Support The history of American whaling and regional maritime activities comes alive thanks to the museum's outstanding collections and superb educational programs. The conservation department provides vital services and resources to the museum and to the local community.

The Enchanted Circle Theater, Holyoke Organizational Support Using music, dance, theater, literature and the visual arts, the theater's highly regarded arts-in-education programs offer something for both inner-city and rural populations. Bilingual performances and diverse programming expose audiences in Holyoke and elsewhere in western Massachusetts to a wide range of ideas and cultures.

Fine Arts Work Center, Provincetown Organizational Support This organization offers a broad range of opportunities, from residential fellowships to national and international emerging artists and writers to exhibitions and readings for the community and the general public. Fellows have won prestigious national prizes, exhibited in distinguished museums and galleries around the country and published more than 200 books of poetry, fiction and nonfiction.

"Our ambition is to provide an unforgettable offering of superlative theater, performance, education and training. The support of the Massachusetts Cultural Council enables us to provide programs that reflect the needs and interests of the widest range of members in our Massachusetts communities."

Christopher Sink, Managing Director, Shakespeare & Co.

YOUTHREACH When young people get involved in the arts, amazing things happen—research shows that the arts improve learning and a child's self-esteem. The YouthReach Initiative makes grants to arts organizations and other community groups to support in-depth arts programs for young people in need. Launched in 1994, YouthReach now supports 38 partnerships in communities across Massachusetts. These partnerships serve a wide range of populations: young people with disabilities, school dropouts, homeless youth, young people facing neighborhood violence, court-involved youth and pregnant or parenting teens. Activities take place outside the school, after regular school hours, during the summer, and on weekends—at times and in places where kids are most in need of constructive activities.

SCIENCE IN THE COMMUNITY Nonprofit science organizations have an enormous role to play in the education and development of our young people. Modeled after YouthReach, the MCC's Science in the Community Initiative makes three-year grants to support partnerships between science institutions and community organizations that provide in-depth programs for youth. Such programs are designed to improve scientific literacy, excite interest in the sciences, promote critical thinking, raise confidence and build career awareness. Now entering its fifth year, the Science in the Community Initiative supports 10 partnerships and serves more than 1,300 young people in communities across the state. In 2000, $357,480 in grants funded these projects, including new ones in Boston and Plymouth.

Education

The Massachusetts Cultural Council's educational programs bring together schools, artists and cultural organizations with the goals of stimulating imaginations, building critical and creative thought and providing teachers with professional development opportunities. Since the Education Reform Act was passed in 1993, every community in the Commonwealth has been part of a statewide effort to change the way children are educated. The MCC is committed to developing the curriculum frameworks required by law and promoting legislation and other policies that encourage schools, districts and communities to develop comprehensive arts education programs. In 2000 the MCC distributed more than $2.8 million to K-12 education programs statewide.

Last year, $463,838 was distributed through the Council's Event & Residency Program, which places artists in schools for periods ranging from one day to 10 weeks.

In 2000, Massachusetts lawmakers included $750,000 in the Department of Education budget for the Council's after-school programs. Almost 100,000 students participate in Event & Residency activities each year.

A 1999 study of school districts nationwide found the most important factor when it comes to a quality arts education program is the involvement of key segments of the community, including parents, the superintendent and the school board. Five of the educational programs are highlighted on the next page.

Pocumtuck Valley Memorial Association, Deerfield Education Partnership Initiative “Turns of the Centuries” expands the study of United States and Massachusetts history by bringing the nineteenth century alive online. The collaboration with the Frontier Regional School District, Deerfield Arts Partnership and Greenfield Community College has resulted in a multigrade humanities curriculum that features digitized museum artifacts and addresses the state’s History and Social Science Framework.

Chestnut Street Middle School, Springfield Event & Residency Program Visual artist Robert Clark gave students in grades 6–8 hands-on experiences in expressing themselves through art with Ceramica Tile Mural. Students researched, designed and installed a large-scale tile mural based on local and historic artwork.

The Children’s Museum, Boston Education Partnership Initiative Nearly 200 Boston public school system kindergarten teachers are receiving professional development and curricular resources that will enable them to translate city and state learning standards into developmentally appropriate activities. Working in partnership with City Stage theatre company, Wheelock College and Wampanoag tribal leaders, teachers will help their students to get an earlier grasp of social studies, science and language arts.

Bridgewater-Raynham Regional School Event & Residency Program Fourth graders in two local schools worked with visual artist Beth Silvercloud to study weaving techniques and create textile art like that used by Native Americans in four United States regions they were studying.

Whittier Regional Technical High School, Haverhill Event & Residency Program Puppeteer Judith O’Hare presented workshops and demonstrations for students in grades 10–12 who were taking early childhood education classes. Students will be able to incorporate these techniques in their work with children.

“In Massachusetts, we are surrounded with history, the finest art collections and the best performance organizations in the world. We really have a responsibility to introduce students to what is available to them.”
Susan Wheltle, Massachusetts Department of Education

● EDUCATION PARTNERSHIP INITIATIVE Cultural organizations represent some of the state’s most valuable educational resources and play a vital role in reform. Lasting change in education, however, will only come from a coordinated, long-term effort by a committed cross-section of the community. The goal of the Council’s Education Partnership Initiative is to promote systemic change in the way that schools educate children in the arts, humanities and sciences. The initiative provides grants for multiyear partnerships among cultural organizations, school districts and community groups to support activities designed to ensure that arts and cultural programming are part of the schools’ basic curricula. In 2000, $697,229 was distributed in 13 grants, including new projects in New Bedford, Pittsfield and Beverly.

Artists

The development of any artistic discipline takes years of dedication and determination and a lot of positive reinforcement. The Massachusetts Cultural Council provides grants and fellowships to individual artists to recognize exceptional work and support further development of their talents. In 2000, $501,500 was provided to artists directly through Artist Grants. The MCC connects artists to their communities—on tour, in schools, in elder care facilities and in other venues. The MCC is working to meet the needs of individual artists by developing programs dealing with issues, such as housing and healthcare, and helping artists integrate their personal and professional needs.

Categories of funding in 2000: Choreography, Painting, Works on Paper, Poetry and Fiction.

Classes sponsored by the Massachusetts Cultural Council and regional housing partnerships enabled artists in Boston and the Merrimack Valley to learn about issues relevant to first-time home buyers; benefits of participation included substantial assistance in meeting down-payment and closing costs.

In 2000, the Massachusetts Cultural Council launched an exciting effort to focus on folk and traditional arts resources deeply rooted within specific cultural communities.

"The endorsement of this grant has given me a confidence in my work that is not measurable in dollars."

Don Lee, Boston, 1998 Artist Grants Recipient, Fiction

"My studio was lost in the Kendall Center for the Arts fire on April 9, 1999. I am slowly replacing lost materials and equipment. I have purchased hand-dyed fabrics to resume my artistic work. This grant from the MCC will encourage my spirit to keep on."

Judith Larzelere, Belmont, 1999 Artist Grants Finalist, Crafts

"It is important for local residents to realize that the creation of art is available to anyone in the community. Everyone has access to the arts, even those who don't consider themselves to be artists."

Gail Thomas, Writer, Shutesbury, participant in Elder Arts Initiative

"As helpful as this grant is financially, it is even more welcome as boon to the spirit."

Peter Maeck, Lexington, 1999 Artist Grants Recipient, Playwriting/New Theater Work

Partnerships

Partnerships open doors to financial and human resources, information and networks that the Massachusetts Cultural Council cannot open on its own. And by reaching out to private industry and funders, the Council builds another link to the communities that make up Massachusetts. Four of the MCC's current partnerships are:

Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) Mini-Grants

A partnership with Very Special Arts Massachusetts, launched in 1993. The ADA Mini-Grants Program supports efforts by cultural organizations to make their programs fully accessible to people with disabilities, helping the programs to go beyond the minimum physical accessibility requirements of the ADA. The program has been cited as a model by the National Endowment for the Arts and has been replicated in several other areas of the country.

Massachusetts Cultural Facilities Project (MCFP)

A partnership with New York's Nonprofit Finance Fund (NFF) and the New England Foundation for the Arts. The MCFP offers advisory services, planning grants and low-interest loans to promote a strategic approach to development of cultural facilities. The MCFP, which began in 1995, has a loan pool of $3 million created by a $1.5 million MCC challenge grant and a $1.5 million NFF match.

Massachusetts Foundation for the Humanities (MFH)

A partnership to promote public programs in the humanities, including literature, history and philosophy. With major funding from the Massachusetts Cultural Council and the National Endowment for the Humanities, MFH provides grants; organizes conferences, lectures and discussion programs for the public; and oversees targeted initiatives like the Media Literacy Initiative.

New England Foundation for the Arts (NEFA)

A partnership with the regional grant-making organization that raises money from national, state and local funders in support of cultural programs. In addition to the Massachusetts Cultural Facilities Project, the Massachusetts Cultural Council and NEFA jointly sponsor grant programs for individual arts, including the Massachusetts Touring Program.

Museum (female) Portraits in the Museum's State House Women's Exhibition Project, State House, Boston

THROUGH OUR PROGRAMS AND PARTNERSHIPS, THE MCC IS COMMITTED TO CREATING ADDITIONAL OPPORTUNITIES FOR ARTS, HUMANITIES AND SCIENCE ORGANIZATIONS— AND INCREASED CULTURAL PROGRAMMING MEANS INCREASES IN RELATED SPENDING AND STATE REVENUES. FACT: THREE BOSTON MUSEUMS (THE MUSEUM OF FINE ARTS, MUSEUM OF SCIENCE AND NEW ENGLAND AQUARIUM) TOGETHER DRAW MORE PEOPLE ANNUALLY THAN THE RED SOX, CELTICS AND BRUINS COMBINED!

WARDS

Commonwealth

The Commonwealth Awards are the state's highest honors in the arts, sciences and humanities. Introduced in 1993, the awards are given every two years in recognition of celebrated and unsung heroes alike who contribute to our quality of life.

"A Commonwealth Award is a singular distinction for those who have committed their lives to the arts, humanities and interpretive sciences in Massachusetts. I feel honored by this recognition, which comes from every citizen in the Commonwealth."

It's a new millennium, which gives us an opportunity to reflect on our past and reinvest in our future. Massachusetts has a history of more than 30 years of public support for the arts, sciences and humanities, and in that time there's been tremendous growth in the number of cultural organizations and programs that build our communities and nurture our souls.
